

Anna's decision-making profile

How I like to get information	How to present choices to me	How you can help me to understand	The best times for me to make a decision	When it's not a good time for me to make a decision
In small amounts. I can read but can't take in the information very well Spoken to me is best and picture books with examples can help I like information to be factual and not emotional	Tell me that I need to make a choice and give each option a number (or pretend one hand means one option and the other hand another) and then I can point to my choice	Use a book with pictures describing the choice or relate the choice to TV shows I like Help me by giving me facts. Don't use emotional reasons or other people as reasons because I don't relate myself to others very well	Early in the day – after breakfast and my medication When I say "I'm all cheered up today" When I have just shown you something new I've bought When I'm out after church and I'm shopping Over lunch at the restaurant	From 4.00pm onwards – I get very tired Before mealtimes – I get very hungry and it affects my concentration When I am biting my fingers or punching my stomach When I am repeating: "I don't care!" Before I've had my medication
